

First fete a special event for Unity

'Think pink' theme supports the Cindy Mackenzie foundation

Bellvista will be awash with pink on Sunday as thousands descend on Unity College for its inaugural fete.

The fete will be an opportunity to relax in an outdoor cafe and listen to live music while the little ones hit the rides and scope out which showbags to buy.

But the point of difference with this community gathering is its support for the Cindy Mackenzie Breast Cancer Foundation.

All participants are asked to wear something pink to the event to raise awareness for the Sunshine Coast-based charity, which supports hundreds of women and their families who have faced the cancer battle.

Fete convenor Colleen Read said members of the foundation would also be selling their merchandise on the day.

A fete wouldn't be complete without raffles and the event boasts some amazing prizes to be won.

Unity College principal Rudy Goosem said the timing was right to begin a school fete this year as the school had a full cohort from Prep to Year 12 for the first time.

"We opened in 2006 and we have continually grown to around 900 students," he said.

"This will be a great way to bring the community together."

The fun starts at 10am on Sunday, August 29, and will continue until about 3pm.
